SOCIAL MEDIA: A BOON OR A BANE

Man is known as social animal since human existence and Neurobiology claims that humans are inherently social and hence like to be socially connected. Being connected with friends, relatives, neighbors and colleagues has played a significant role in bonding and hence relieves stress, anxiety, and sadness.

Ms. Parul Bali
PRT - IDPS

There is a lot of scientific data which reveals that people with good social contacts and networking are less vulnerable to psychological issues and development of mental illnesses as compared to those people who are not socially connected.

Humans communicate in different ways such as interpersonal communication, group communication etc. Earlier people communicated via letters, visiting each other and in time through telephone. With the advances in technology development in modes of communication with time, the access to internet and social media, world has become global village. Now it has become easier to reach out to anyone in any part of the world in no time.

These days' people spend most of their time on social media platforms. After the emergence of COVID-19 infection people were advised to stay at home by their respective governments to curb the spread of the said infection which resulted in a boom of use of social media. According to recent data, as many as 90% of young adults currently spend time on social media sites and majority of them using WhatsApp, Facebook, Instagram, or Twitter, at least once per day. These figures are increasing day by day as social media has now become quite important in everyone's life.

Social media has many positive and enjoyable benefits, but it can also have negative effects on us.

Positive effects of social media

- Ø By staying connected on social media we can find new friends and build relationships with like-minded people.
- Ø We can nurture already existing relationships.
- Ø Social media can be a great source for faster communication.
- Ø We can stay in touch with our friends and family who are far away from us.
- Ø Social media can raise a powerful voice for the underprivileged citizens of the society.
- Ø It is easier to reach out to more people and put forward one's point of view.
- Ø By sharing one's personal experiences on social media, we learn to empathize and relate with each other.
- Ø Social media is capable of escaping boredom and refreshing one's mind so that one can have a fresh start and improve one's performance.
- Ø On social media platforms we can raise awareness about any social cause and health issues.
- Ø We can discuss new topics relevant to our society.
- Ø Social media can be a great source of income for many.
- Ø News from just about any part of the world can spread likenever before on social media.
- Ø It can be very helpful for expanding business.
- Ø Social media is a great place for students to find mentors and training programs to learn new skills and gain knowledge.
- Ø It has given new lease of life to learners and mentors by connecting during classes, conferences etc. through zoom meetings, Google Classrooms, WebEx etc.
- Ø Many influencers will openly share their knowledge to help others grow.
- Ø It enables such people to talk to others, discuss their mental health issues.
- Ø Social media makes it infinitely easy for you to find content that serves your interests.

Negative or toxic effects of social media

- Social media is highly addictive.

It is a proven fact that people develop screen dependency and get addicted to social media sites.

- Social media can damage self-image.

Social media sites provide tools that allow people to earn other's approval for their appearance and the possibility to compare themselves to others.

- False belief of control.

Social media can make you believe that you can control the way you want to etc.

- Social media can actually make you lonely.

Spending time in your room alone can make you lonely. It actually separates us from others. So, this is no replacement for real social networking, neighbours and friends.

- It brings sadness many a times

Social media brings less moment-to-moment happiness.

- Infodemics:

Pandemic and other catastrophes are complicated by false and baseless news which actually horrifies the society and spreads a lot of misinformation and hence contributes negatively.

- Danger of cyber bullying on social media.

Cyber bullying is a growing concern, due to the horrific effects it had on teens over recent years.

- Students and teenagers waste a lot of time on social networking sites, which leads them to focus less on their academics.

Playing online and offline games, watching pornography, fantasy / magical networks etc. distracts children from their real goals like academics, family, friends and so on.

- Social media can be the root cause of depression and anxiety.

BODY LANGUAGE

When we communicate with others, we express our thoughts and feelings not only through the words we choose, but also through our tone of voice, facial expression and body language. In fact, many communications experts believe that far more information is communicated non-verbally (without words) than verbally (with words). "Body language" is an important part of non-verbal communication.

Ms. Anupreet Kour
PRT - IDPS

Body languages includes many different aspects of our everyday physical behavior: the way we greet one another; how we stand, how we sit or walk; the way we position our arms and legs or use our hands and eyes are some of the most basic.

To learn another language is more than just learning words and grammar, it involves learning about another culture, too. We learn much of our own culture's body language before we learn to speak, from the time we are children, usually without even being aware of it. And that body language varies from culture to culture, so it's something to which second language learners should pay attention.

So, how attuned are you to other people's body language? Try this little experiment. Turn the volume on the television right down while you watch people interact on the screen. You may find it is more difficult to understand what's happening between people from unfamiliar cultures.

Sometimes, cultural differences in appropriate body language can cause discomfort or misunderstandings too. For example, there are definite cultural differences in how much distance should be kept between two people who are speaking together. If you are used to people keeping their distance, you will feel very uncomfortable and probably move away repeatedly, if someone keeps trying to stand closer to you at a party! We call this the: "personal comfort zone".

Another common example of misunderstanding is the use of a smile, in some Asian cultures, a smile can show embarrassment or apology. however, smiling back at a teacher who is unhappy with you, or a stranger whose foot you accidentally stepped upon is probably not a good idea in most English-speaking cultures! Also, you should not assume that nodding your head means yes or that shaking your head means no or vice versa. Yes, you can even get that wrong, with potentially disastrous consequences

13 Years Old Sivakasi fire victim, Jayakumar, invented a low-cost fire extinguisher

13 YO Sivakasi fire victim, Jayakumar, invented a low-cost fire extinguisher which triggers water sprinklers when it detects heat from fire. Jayakumar's mother suffered severe burns in a factory fire in Sivakasi. She worked in one of the many fireworks factories there. In these factories, fire safety standards are nonexistent. And that is what caused his mother serious burn injuries. Jayakumar decided he would make these factories a safe place for all the factory workers. His fire extinguisher has a heat sensor that detects heat from fire and activates the water motors. Before this, he had invented a similar device to detect LPG cylinder fires. It won him national recognition and a chance to showcase his device on a national stage.

FATHER'S EYES

A teenager lived alone with his father, and the two of them had a very special relationship. The father believed in encouragement. Even though the son was always on the bench, his father was always in the stands cheering. He never missed a game.

This young man was the smallest of the class when he entered high school. His father continued to encourage him but also made it very clear that he did not have to play football if he didn't want to. But the young man loved football and decided to hang in there. He was determined to try his best at every practice, and perhaps he'd get to play when he became a senior. All through high school he never missed a practice or a game, but remained a bench warmer all four years. His faithful father was always in the stands, always with words of encouragement for him. When the young man went to college, he decided to try out for the football team as a "walk-on."

Everyone was sure he could never make the cut, but he did. The coach admitted that he kept him on the roster because he always puts his heart and soul to every practice, and at the same time, provided the other members with the spirit and hustle they badly needed. The news that he had survived the cut thrilled him so much that he rushed to the nearest phone and called his father. His father shared his excitement and was sent season tickets for all the college games. This persistent young athlete never missed practice during his four years at college, but he never got to play in the game.

It was the end of his senior football season, and as he trotted onto the practice field shortly before the big play off game, the coach met him with a telegram. The young man read the telegram and he became deathly silent. Swallowing hard, he mumbled to the coach, "My father died this morning. Is it all right if I miss practice today?"

The coach put his arm gently around his shoulder and said, "Take the rest of the week off, son. And don't even plan to come back to the game on Saturday." Saturday arrived, and the game was not going well.

In the third quarter, when the team was ten points behind, a silent young man quietly slipped into the empty locker room and put on his football gear. As he ran onto the sidelines, the coach and his players were astounded to see their faithful team-mate back so soon. "Coach, please let me play. I've just got to play today," said the young man.

The coach pretended not to hear him. There was no way he wanted his worst player in this close playoff game. But the young man persisted, and finally feeling sorry for the kid, the coach gave in.

"All right," he said. "You can go in." Before long, the coach, the players and everyone in the stands could not believe their eyes. This little unknown, who had never played before, was doing everything right. The opposing team could not stop him. He ran, he passed, blocked and tackled like a star. His team began to triumph.

The score was soon tied. In the closing seconds of the game, this kid intercepted a pass and ran all the way for the winning touchdown. The fans broke loose. His team-mates hoisted him onto their shoulders. Such cheering you've never heard!

Finally, after the stands had emptied and the team had showered and left the locker room, the coach noticed that the young man was sitting quietly in the corner all alone. The coach came to him and said, "Kid, I can't believe it. You were fantastic!" Tell me what got into you? How did you do it? He looked at the coach, with tears in his eyes, and said, "Well, you knew my dad died, but did you know that my dad was blind?" The young man swallowed hard and forced a smile, "Dad came to all my games, but today was the first time he could see me play, and I wanted to show him I could do it!"
